Kim is a major projects lawyer with 15 years' experience advising stakeholders on all construction stages of the project cycle, in particular contract administration, dispute avoidance, dispute resolution and compliance issues. She has supplemented this experience by completing a Masters in Construction Law at the University of Melbourne in Australia. From an industry perspective, Kim was chair of the committee that reviewed and drafted the 2nd edition of the Society of Construction Law's Delay and Disruption Protocol.

Kim has significant experience in construction arbitration and is a solicitor advocate (Higher Rights, Civil).

Kim's work has included advising:

- international contractors regarding multi-US$100m delay and disruption claims referred to arbitration arising out of the construction of an airport in the Middle East
- Citadel Capital and Egyptian Refining Company on the EPC phase of their $3.7bn hydrocracking refinery near Cairo
- an international contractor in relation to allegations of bribery in the award of construction contracts in the oil sector in the Middle East, the Caspian region and Africa
- a mining company in relation to delay and defect claims arising out of the design and construction of an aluminium facility in the Middle East
- the sponsor on the Ghana airport city development regarding the structure for and negotiation of the design and construction contract
- a developer in the UAE in relation to arbitration proceedings involving claims worth over US$100m concerning the construction of roads and utilities for a new master plan development
- an African government entity in relation to international arbitration proceedings arising out of the construction of nationally significant infrastructure
- an international contractor in relation to delay and disruption claims arising out of the EPC contract for an independent gas fired power plant in the Middle East
- a mining company in relation to various greenfield projects in West Africa
- Brookfield against Mott MacDonald in one of the largest and most complex construction claims in UK litigation history relating to the design and construction of Wembley Stadium in London

Kim is a qualified lawyer in England and Wales and Australia. She is also a foreign registered lawyer in Dubai.

Kim is co-author of the Engineering and Construction Arbitration chapter in the recent Kluwer publication Arbitration in England.
