

Alexander Schilling is a senior legal counsel at the Litigation Department of Siemens AG. His main area of expertise is the resolution of disputes in large projects. He represents Siemens AG in claim negotiations and conducts legal proceedings before state courts and arbitral tribunals.

Before joining the Litigation Department, Alexander advised the Marine & Shipbuilding Business of Siemens AG which included negotiating and drafting contracts for the supply of essential parts of large sea vessels.

Before joining Siemens AG, Alexander worked as Senior Associate at Baker & McKenzie's Frankfurt office. There, Alexander was part of the Dispute Resolution Team and represented clients in national and international arbitration proceedings as well as before state courts.

Alexander studied law in Germany, graduated from the University of Passau in 2004 and obtained a PhD from the University of Augsburg in 2010. He acquired a LL.M. from Boston University, USA, and was admitted to the New York Bar in 2009.

Alexander is Co-Author of the commentary on the ICC Arbitration Rules and the DIS Arbitration Rules by Herzberg/Nedden and has published a number of articles.